

Madame K's is a lighthearted look at a profession that has been around for centuries. In the Seattle area there were times of great joy during the heyday of building the railroads and ports. Women were a rare commodity and the "girls" served a vital purpose for those men who built Seattle. Many of the ladies stopped here on their way to the Yukon Gold Rush in Alaska, or, on the way back. The fire of the late 1800's took away a lot of the gaiety, but those strong women who survived and rebuilt still reaped the rewards of strong business sense and customer service.

Madame K's is not making fun of this period, but rather letting people in on a piece of Seattle's history that has almost been erased from the record books. Or, perhaps, just not documented because many found it to be in bad taste. It is said that during an early 1900's census, the city officials asked these women to write "seamstress" as their profession for fear of the rest of the country seeing just how many prostitutes resided in the Seattle Area. Madame K's theme came about when Kirsten (that's the Madame) heard a rumor that right above where you are sitting now, was once a brothel. She found it extremely intriguing, so she decided to research it. Not a small task considering she had so many other things to do, hates to go to the library, and ran into so many dead ends before discovering the sole book that helped her out. Can you believe she forgot the title right after she read it?!

We hope that you enjoy the pieces of trivia floating around the restaurant. If you have any good tidbits about the subject, please let us know. We'd love to let others enjoy our history!

Just a note to say thank you for visiting my house. I appreciate you choosing us for your mouth watering dining experience. I hope you enjoyed your visit as much as we enjoy feeding and entertaining you!

Much love and affection,

Well Behaved Women
Rarely Make History...

"Every town has its celebrated Madam, eternal women to be sentimentalized down the years. There is something very attractive to a man about a Madam. She combines the brains of a businessman, the toughness of a prize fighter, the warmth of a companion, the humor of a tragedian."

-John Steinbeck
